CONSIDERING THE RENEWAL OF THE

Dear Mayor McMannes and Council Members,

This letter is to address the public hearing for the renewal of the City of Humbles' Curfew for Persons Under the Age of 17 to be held, Thursday, April 25, 2013. I have several comments I would like to make about this renewal.

As the Crime Victim Liaison for the City of Humble Police Department and as a Juvenile Program Coordinator for the City of Humble Municipal Court, I believe it is important to keep this curfew in place. Looking at the number of curfew violations will show that there has been an increase in the number of tickets written to juveniles for this violation. Keeping the curfew in effect may help curtail the number of juvenile arrests made for other crimes such as criminal mischief, burglaries and other crimes committed by juveniles. Continuing the curfew may also help reduce truancy. Additionally, with a curfew in place, there is a possibility that it could deter non-delinquent juveniles and others (adults) from becoming crime victims. This ordinance gives the police department a legal tool to help keep juveniles off the streets during those hours deemed not appropriate for them to be on the streets of this city.

Please consider this request to renew the City of Humbles' Curfew for Persons Under the Age of 17. Thank you for your consideration.

TML LEGISLATIVE UPDATE

 Legislative
UPDATE

April 5, 2013
Number 13

Tree Preservation Ordinances:
“Crazy, Asinine, and the Biggest Scam in the State of Texas”

That’s exactly what a state legislator said to city representatives who testified against H.B. 1858 (Workman) on April 2. The bill would allow a property owner to cut down a tree on his property if he believes it poses a fire risk, even if a municipal ordinance prohibits the cutting. The author explained that the reason for the bill was the devastation caused by the recent Bastrop wildfires. Witnesses for the bill showed pictures of homes that were destroyed by fire in part because of the trees surrounding them.

While no one wants to see the proliferation of wildfires, no connection whatsoever was made at the hearing between municipal tree preservation ordinances and increased wildfire risk. In fact, the destroyed homes that were shown in the proponent’s photos weren’t even subject to a municipal tree ordinance.

The bill is an example of a common bait-and-switch tactic at the Capitol. By packaging the measure as “fire mitigation,” attention was diverted from the real issue—desired preemption of municipal authority. That became clear at the hearing when a committee member aggressively questioned a mayor who was there to explain why his city adopted a tree preservation ordinance (answer: because the citizens demanded it) and how it works (answer: it in no way creates a fire hazard). In fact, the mayor’s city is one of only a handful of cities in the state certified as a “Firewise Community” by the National Fire Protection Association, meaning that the city’s fire protection regulations are among the finest.

“Cities...think they’re smarter than the property owners out in the communities,” the committee member said. Perhaps instead it was a case of a state legislator believing his judgment is superior to that of a mayor and five city councilmembers who were elected to represent their citizens locally.

Religious Freedom?

Ensuring that a Sunday school classroom has smoke detectors does not infringe on anyone’s practice of religion. Requiring the beams and trusses holding up the roof above a church sanctuary to meet engineering standards enables congregations to worship without fear that the ceiling will collapse on them. The same sensible standards apply to places of worship that protect the safety and health of Texans in other buildings they enter. A bill heard this week, H.J.R. 110 (Isaac) would amend the Texas Constitution in a way that would prevent such sensible city requirements.

The resolution seems deceptively simple, but would overturn decades of judicial precedent relating to the right to practice religion. How? By removing one word: “substantially”. The current-law judicial test for determining whether a government practice relating to religion is unconstitutional requires a “substantial burden” on a person’s ability to practice his or her religion. Under that test, uniform and generally-applicable regulations won’t usually be found unconstitutional. For example, a municipal requirement that a place of worship obtain a building permit and comply with uniform building codes won’t be unconstitutional, because it is not a substantial burden on a person’s ability to build a worship facility. By removing “substantially,” H.J.R. 110 would strike down any ordinance that “burdens” religion by even a small amount.

Further, H.J.R. 110 would open the floodgates for lawsuits seeking protection for every kind of bizarre religious practice imaginable. Attempts to enforce animal cruelty laws, child protection laws, health regulations, or public nuisance ordinances against alleged “religious practices” would bring needless litigation.

The Texas Religious Freedom Act as it’s currently written protects religion by balancing that important freedom with public safety concerns. H.J.R. 110 would destroy that balance. Fiscal Transparency Bill's Impact on Certificates of Obligation

H.B. 14 by Representative Jim Pitts (known as the “fiscal transparency” bill) would impose numerous financial reporting requirements on local governments and dramatically restrict cities’ ability to issue certificates of obligation (COs). More specifically, the bill would change the number of voters needed to petition to force an election on the issuance of a CO from five percent of the qualified voters in the city to five percent of the total number of voters who voted in the most recent gubernatorial general election in the city. To see how this would translate for Texas cities, the League surveyed a range of cities on the number of registered voters in the city compared to the number of voters who voted in the 2010 gubernatorial election.

The findings show that usually less than half of a city’s population is registered to vote, but the number of voters who participated in the 2010 gubernatorial election was less than half of the registered voters. For example, a city with a population of 10,000 generally has roughly 5,000 registered voters. Fewer than 2,500 of those voters, however, typically voted in the gubernatorial election. If H.B. 14 passes in its current form, a petition of only 125 people (five percent of those voters) in such a city would be needed to force an election on the issuance of a CO.

If only 125 people in a city of 10,000 can force an election on a CO, nearly anybody could gather the adequate amount of signatures needed within an hour simply by standing outside the local grocery store. This would drastically limit the ability of a city to issue certificates of obligation. Cities turn to COs in lieu of bonds because of their flexibility for small projects or because an emergency requires immediate action.

In addition, many cities use COs instead of revenue bonds to build utility infrastructure projects because cities can save millions of taxpayer dollars in interest payments by issuing a CO, even though the debt service will ultimately be paid by utility revenues alone and not property taxes. H.B. 14 would almost certainly reduce the number of COs issued by cities, which would lead to increased election costs and significantly higher interest payments on debt issuances that must be funded by local taxpayers.

TCEQ Proposes Rainwater Harvesting Rules

The Texas Commission on Environmental Quality (TCEQ) recently released Rule Project Number 2011-057-290-OW, which relates to rainwater harvesting. The text of the proposal is available at:

http://www.tceq.texas.gov/assets/public/legal/rules/rule_lib/proposals/11057290_pro.pdf

The proposal implements changes made to the Texas Health and Safety Code in 2011 that were designed to encourage the use of rainwater harvesting.

Though the proposed rules allow a city to refuse to connect a rainwater harvesting system to its utility system, as the 2011 bill permits, the rules place additional burdens on cities that could force them to opt out of rainwater harvesting altogether.

Of particular interest to cities is proposed Section 290.44(j)(3), which requires that – at each residence or facility where water from a rainwater harvesting system is used for indoor potable purposes and where there is a connection to a public water system (PWS) – the PWS is responsible for ensuring that minimum treatment requirements are met. Additionally, proposed Section 290.109(h) tasks a PWS with ensuring that the microbiological quality of the treated rainwater is monitored at least annually.

Internet Notice Bill Heard in House Committee

On April 1, the House Committee on Government Efficiency and Reform heard H.B. 3646 by Representative Linda Harper-Brown. The bill would give a city the discretion to provide public notices on its Internet website rather than paying for newspaper publication if the website reaches more readers. Rep. Harper-Brown had hardly begun laying out her bill in her committee before other committee members began to attack her idea as harmful to local newspapers.

The vociferous opposition to the bill by members of the committee was surprising. The fact that many newspapers and related associations attended the hearing to testify against it was not. Opponents argued that eliminating a print publication requirement dramatically reduces government transparency. Of course, that argument ignores the fact that print newspaper readership is declining every year. A 2012 study by the Pew Research Center found that only 23 percent of Americans read print newspapers, and that number had declined by 18 percent over a ten-year period. Burying a public notice in a newspaper that not even a quarter of the citizens read would not appear to promote government transparency.

The League joined other local officials to testify in support of the bill. Testimony showed that not only would H.B. 3646 increase government efficiency by potentially saving cities and taxpayers thousands of dollars, it would actually increase transparency by requiring a city to use whichever medium, be that a newspaper or the Internet, that reaches the largest number of residents.

The bill was left pending in committee. To view the public testimony on the bill, click on the link and fast forward to 3 hours and 44 minutes into the hearing:

TML Names Legislator of the Month for March

Representative Mike Villarreal (D – San Antonio) is the TML Legislator of the Month for March 2013. Representative Villarreal represents House District 123, which includes San Antonio and Castle Hills.

First elected to the Texas House in 2000, Representative Villarreal is serving in his seventh term and chairs the House Committee on Investments and Financial Services. He also serves on the House Committee on Public Education.

Representative Villarreal is a strong supporter of cities and local control. Most recently, Representative Villarreal filed an amendment to Senate Bill 1, the state appropriations bill, that would appropriate an additional $15 million for local parks grants. He is also an outspoken critic of attempts to erode municipal authority. In 2011, Texas Monthly named Representative Villarreal as one of the ten best state legislators.

We hope municipal leaders across Texas, and particularly those in Representative Villarreal's district, express their appreciation to this outstanding leader.

Legislative UPDATE

April 19, 2013
Number 15

Call to Action: Several Detrimental Bills on the Move

Legislators have begun trying to move their bills through the legislative process in earnest, and many of the bills would erode city authority or impose an unfunded mandate:

- Land Acquisition: Two bills, H.B. 1250 (Frank) and H.B. 20 (Kolkhorst), would drag the routine purchase of land by a city into the realm of “eminent domain reform.” Legislators, and some city officials, strongly supported eminent domain reforms prohibiting the use of the power for economic development. The same goes for last session’s process reforms that protect property owners from abuses. The two bills this session are cleverly disguised to look like eminent domain reform, but they are not about eminent domain at all.

The bills would provide that private property acquired through eminent domain or through purchase in connection with an initial offer must be initially used for the public use for which it was acquired. Cities frequently save taxpayer funds by acquiring property ahead of development because they anticipate various public functions that will be needed for an area. For example, a city may purchase land for future fire or police stations or for other municipal buildings. Or a city may purchase easements for utility lines. When a city makes those purchases, it is not required to make a determination of what the exact use will be. The public policy behind allowing a city to make general purchases as would any other buyer in the market is to save taxpayer funds.

H.B. 20 and H.B. 1250 would require a city to bind itself to use in a certain way property purchased on the open market in an arms-length transaction. Both bills were referred to the House Committee on Land and Resource Management. H.B. 20 was heard on April 15 and is pending. H.B. 1250 was heard on March 4 and was voted out of the committee on April 16. It now moves to the House Committee on Calendars.

- Tree Preservation: H.B. 1858 (Workman) would: (1) provide that a city, county, or other political subdivision may not enact or enforce any regulation that restricts the ability of a property owner to remove a tree or vegetation on the owner's property that the owner believes poses a risk of fire to a structure on the property or adjacent property; (2) exempt the City of San Antonio from the bill; and (3) exempt from the bill: (a) regulations relating to property being developed under a municipal permit; (b) regulations governing certain large trees; and (c) regulations designed to mitigate tree-borne diseases as recommended by the Texas A&M Forest Service.

The bill would, for all practical purposes, allow a property owner to clear cut trees even if a city's ordinance prohibits that activity. The bill is framed as a "fire safety bill," but city tree preservation ordinances rarely, if ever, limit a property owner's ability to perform true fire mitigation activities. H.B. 1858 was heard in the House Business and Industry Committee on April 2 and was reported from that committee on April 15.

- Billboard Relocation: H.B. 2244 (Harper-Brown) would provide that a city must pay compensation to a billboard owner if a billboard has to be removed from a city or a city's extraterritorial jurisdiction because: (1) of the widening, construction, or reconstruction of a highway that is part of a state highway project; and (2) it cannot be moved to another place in the city because of a city billboard ordinance. When the Texas Department of Transportation (TxDOT) obtains right-of-way for highway projects, it must pay for that right-of-way or use eminent domain to acquire it. Requiring a city to pay the costs to condemn a billboard that can't remain in place due to a state highway project is an unfunded mandate.

H.B. 2244 was heard in the House Committee on Urban Affairs on April 10 and was voted out of the committee on April 17.

- Civil Service: H.B. 1312 (Fletcher) would require immediate reinstatement to a fire or police position for civil service suspensions while a city appeals the reinstatement order of a hearing officer or civil service commission.

Why is that a problem? When a city feels the need to challenge a civil service reinstatement in court, it's often because the suspension was for a reason—dishonesty, criminal misconduct, or inappropriate sexual conduct—that would make immediate reinstatement impractical or risky. H.B. 1312 was heard in the House Committee on Urban Affairs on March 20 and the committee report was sent to the House Committee on Calendars on April 5.

League staff and city officials testified against all the bills above. Nevertheless, each (except for H.B. 20) has been voted out of a House committee. If your city has concerns, now is the time to

Online Hotel Booking Class Action: Federal Judge Issues Final Judgment

On April 4, U.S. District Judge Orlando Garcia issued a final judgment requiring online hotel booking companies to pay 173 Texas cities more than $55 million in back taxes, plus penalties and interest. The final judgment represents yet another victory for Texas cities in a case that has been ongoing for more than four years.

In 2009, a federal jury ruled in favor of the cities in their class action lawsuit against the online hotel booking companies. The jury awarded $20.6 million to the cities based on their argument that the online companies failed to remit city hotel occupancy tax on the “markup” difference between the amount the companies paid for the rooms and the price at which they sold the rooms to consumers.

In 2011, Judge Garcia entered his post-trial findings of fact and conclusions of law. Reinforcing the jury’s determination that the online travel companies are obligated to pay more in hotel taxes to cities, the judge found that cities were entitled to additional actual damages that accrued since the jury verdict in 2009, ordering the online companies to adjust their business practices to ensure the proper payment of taxes on post-judgment transactions.

Although the recent final judgment by Judge Garcia is promising, the dispute is probably still not over. An appeal by the online travel companies to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals is likely.
